Parashat KEE TETZE... contains Mitzvot which affect every aspect of life. Whether these laws are of an ethical, a religious or a socio-political nature, they are based on a similar set of values. Many of these laws promote concern for the dignity of all people. In dealing with a common laborer, a fugitive slave, or even a condemned criminal, the Torah begins with the premise that all are created in the image of G-d. Those most severely condemned by the Torah are people who nullify the dignity of a fellow human being.
