Parashat SHELAH... The story of the twelve spies in Shelah is an example of the close connection between self-perception and human potential. Upon returning from the Promised Land, ten of the spies bemoan their fear of the land's 'mighty' inhabitants. They tell the people, "We looked like grasshoppers to ourselves, so we must have looked to them". The Israelites were not allowed to enter the land not due to any inability to conquer it, rather because they refused to overcome their self-doubts.

Hatzalah – Hebrew for rescue – is one of the largest U.S. volunteer ambulance services.

Hatzalah's two-tiered response strategy, using First Responders and ambulances, means that fully equipped and trained emergency care providers are at the scene within 2 to 4 minutes.

At times of need, Hatzalah has come extremely quickly to aid our Temple members.

Please keep these numbers handy:
